African civilisations as it symbolised one's family background, social status, spirituality, tribe, and marital status. Members of royalty would often wear elaborate hairstyles as a symbol of their stature, and someone in mourning, usually women, would pay little attention to their hair during the period of grieving. Hair was seen as a symbol of fertility as thick, long tresses and neat, clean hair symbolised one's ability to bear healthy children. A History Of African Women's Hairstyles - Africa.com -
